Powerful places evoke powerful art. Since their discovery, the Teton Mountains in northwest Wyoming have been inspiring artists of all walks of life. The legacy continues. These songwriters, nestled within beautiful landscapes, portray passion that could have only come from such a place. They come from all over the country, but have all sought refuge at one time in the Teton.

Reina G. Collins is a roots rockin' songstress. A true troubadour of music, Reina has been rolling steady for over two decades. Her newest album, "Auston to Boston," was inspired by a recent 10,000 mile road trip. Previously she released, "Even if I Fall", which featured Rob Barteletti and Tony Furtado. "Reina's voice reminds me of a mountain stream." - Ben Winship

Jessica Kilroy is a songwriter from big sky country, Montana. Her songs have the depth of the land she is from. She has shared the stage with Darrell Scott, Guy Davis, Doc Watson, Tony Trishka, and Richie Havens. She won the Owl Lounge songwriters contest and has one of the most distinctively beautiful voices you'll ever hear.

"A 21st century Emmylou Harris." Skip Ewing

"Her voice is beautiful and pure, it takes me somewhere deep and way back." Guy Davis
"One of the generations leading female songwriters." Nerak Roth

Michael G. Batdorf has self produced three albums on his own label. In 2004 he wrote a soundtrack for a National Genesis Award Winning Film. He has also shared the stage with the Eric McFadden Trio, Great American Taxi with Vince Herman, Larry Keel Experience, Drew Emmitt Band, Martha Scanlan and Thomas Speed of Realtime Travelers, Ben Winship, and was scheduled to open for John Prine and Los Lobos. "When I listen to singer-songwriters, I ask whether or not they sound like they mean what they say. Michael passes the test very well." - Ashik, music extraordinaire
